PeerPositive.com:

A highly innovative, online peer leadership resource

1

Public Teen Site:

Looking for an engaging site to direct students to after your classroom presentations? PeerPositive is packed full of music, videos, and testimonials that address issues from substance abuse, violence and sex to media influence, marriage prep and peer pressure. National hotline links, a parent section, cool resources...It's the TOTAL PACKAGE!

2

Web Party Builder:

PeerPositive.com is the only website where students can build, save, preview, and print their own lesson plans or "web parties". The building process is a step-by-step application that covers the selected theme thoroughly.

3

Evaluation Tool:

Teachers can evaluate students, grade, and track progress with ease. Students will see their scores and comments when they login. Grading rubrics are available online for teacher assistance.

4

Certification Training:

Frontline Youth Communications provides 9 hours of onsite training to get your peer leaders off and running. The training can be done in one session or split over two.

OBJECTIVES:

To develop young leaders of character, equipped to positively impact their communities.

To raise awareness and provide risk avoidance solutions for the growing epidemics of youth violence, substance abuse, teen pregnancy and STD rates.

To increase information retention by providing a vehicle through which students can disseminate to their peers the valuable information that has been imparted to them

To create a climate of "positive" peer pressure within schools and communities, by providing youth with information, leadership training and community service opportunities centered on empowering youth to become the solution to their own problems.

Do you test positive?

"I love the site. The videos are very appropriate for teens, and the section for parents is very educational. I like the ease of the site, and I love the gradebook concept. It will make it easy to evaluate the students. I give it an A++."
